CONGRATULATIONS were the Order of the Day when the National Capital's 1st Fighter Interceptor Squadron completed one year of accident free flying. Col. Joel D. Thorvaldson, Commandant, and M/Sgt. Frank M. Stabile, Line Chief, congratulate each other in front of "Mr. Bones," the squadron insignia. The squadron completed over 5000 hours of flying time in T-33's, F-86D's and F-86L's without an accident. The 95th, a unit of the Defense Command's 85th Air Division, is based at Andrews AFB, D. C.

BLEAK NEW YEAR'S FOR 1,125 IN AF

The Air Force will suspend 1,125 rated pilots from flying status 1 January—most of them between 35 and 45 years of age. The New Year will see 699 pilots, 3 navigators and 193 aircraft observers grounded. They were named by the 1957 Central Flight Status Selection Board, which screened the records of approximately 3,200 rated officers. For the Air Force's explanation of their action turn Page 23.

Half-Billion Service Pay Raise Bill, Slightly Changed, Heads For Budget Bureau And Quick White House Approval

GEN. DOOLITTLE TELLS NEED, PAGE 28

SECRETARY of Defense Neil H. McElroy, who expects speedy approval, is set to send a $560,000,000 military pay raise bill to the Bureau of the Budget. Barring a last-minute hitch, the pay adjustment measure, which has powerful advance support from the President, will be sent across the Potomac River from the Pentagon over the week-end or early next week.

The Department of Defense Pay and Allowance Committee was giving the proposed legislation final scrutiny as THE JOURNAL went to press.

The bill, as previously reported, provides a minimum six percent increase for everyone on active duty for more than two years and a similar six percent cost-of-living boost for all persons on the retired list.

Last week's issue told details of the forthcoming legislation, emphasizing that the bill, as now drafted, proposes to implement Cordiner Plan pay increases for officers over a four-year period.

It was learned this week that a decision has been made to revise downward the proposed pay increase for top generals and admirals. Their base pay, under terms of the bill now ready for the Budget Bureau, would be slightly less than the $22,000 that goes to service secretaries.

The Cordiner plan would have provided a top military base pay of $24,000.

"Professional" Armed Force Advocated By Dr. Teller; Cites Need For Specialists

Development of a highly professional military force is essential to the survival of the United States, Dr. Edward Teller, "father" of the H-bomb, has declared.

The renowned scientist appeared 25 November as the first witness before the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee as that group opened its widely-heralded investigation into the state of the nation's defenses.

Dr. Teller told the Senators the tasks of all branches of the military service are "becoming more highly technical" every day, and for this reason the United States must "develop professional Armed Services" made up of many "high grade specialists" in numerous fields.

Events clearly indicated, he said, that from now on out, "the main strength of our defenses will have to rest with the professionals."

Dr. Teller outlined some of the steps which he believes the United States should take to recapture the lead recently taken by Russia in the space-satellite and missiles field, and to retain the lead which we continue to hold in other areas. He said we must:

- 1—Determine a "reasonable way" to accelerate and expand our missile program without bringing "disorder" to those projects already underway.
- 2—Be more generous with our money, applying it wherever it can be effectively used.
- 3—Increase our research and development.

Memorial Stadium May Double Seating

The planned 30,000-seat Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium at Annapolis could be expanded to 45,000 or 60,000 seats if the drive to raise funds for the project went far over the top.

Capt. William Catlett, Special Assistant to the Chief of Naval Personnel, said the drive to raise $3.1 million has passed the $2 million mark. He said five of the major veterans' organizations have joined in the campaign.

The veterans' organizations have agreed to sell a special recording of "Anchors Aweigh" and the "Marine Corps Hymn" at local posts. The 45 rpm record features Mitch Miller of Columbia Records, who leads a brass band and an all-male chorus in a spirited rendition of the traditional favorites.

At the same time, each post which makes a contribution of $100 or more, through the sale of the recordings, will be entitled to have a name-plate affixed to one of the stadium seats honoring their organization or any individual of its choice.

Captain Catlett emphasized that sale of the records is not restricted to veterans' organizations. The special edition can be obtained by any individual who sends $1 or more to the Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium, P. O. Box 777, Annapolis, Md.

Target date for completion of the stadium is September 1959.

All Services Work, Live, And Play As One To Improve Joint And Combined Techniques At Armed Forces Staff College

ARMED FORCES STAFF COLLEGE
NORFOLK, VA.

WORKING together under the motto "That All May Labor as One" is the theme and key of this busy Armed Forces Staff College.

Born of the necessity of World War II to teach officers of the Armed Services of the capabilities and limitations of all the Services and to train them to work together in joint planning, it has expanded in importance and significance as that function has grown and with it the broader need for the organization and planning of combined operations with our allies of the free world.

Students entering here are the youngest of the three top joint colleges operated at Department of Defense level. Most of them are of lieutenant colonel/commander grades and their ages average 39 years, whereas the National War College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces draw upon officers in the colonel/captain range and their ages average 44 years for the former and 42 for the latter.

For many of the officers entering this college it is their first duty bringing them into close and continuous contact with officers of the other Services.

Here an officer not only works with the other Services, but he and his family live and play with officers and families of the other forces day in and day out for the full five and a half

Fighting Forces Quotes And Comments

GENERAL ALFRED M. GRUENTHER, USA-Ret., head of the American Red Cross, told the Washington, D. C., Society of Engineers 20 November that Russia probably is ahead in ICBM's, but we have a complex of bases around the world and short-range missiles. "Any attack by Russia would be severely punished," the former NATO commander declared.

• There are many who think General Gruenther in the near future will be tapped for a key Government post. His name is mentioned in connection with the plan by Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy to name a Single Manager for future weapons, among other assignments.

VICE PRESIDENT CLARENCE L. JOHNSON, in charge of engineering and research for Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, said 22 November that the F-104 Starfighter "is adaptable to more jobs than anyone has publicly stated." He called it "today's fastest and highest flying airplane."

• Air Force people and Lockheed officials for a long time have sought Defense Department permission to announce some of the speed achievements of the Starfighter. Until now, approval has been denied. This could change in advance of the Wright Day celebrations next month.

GENERAL THOMAS S. POWER, C-in-C, told the men of his command it is essential to maintain one third of the SAC strike force "on continuous alert," added that "this entails personal inconvenience and sacrifices to you and your families. You can be sure," he said, "that I will do everything possible to ease this aspect of your alert duties."

• You can expect General Power to give vigorous support to the SAC Dependents Assistance Program. It's undoubtedly the best in the Services.

SUN RUN PILOTS—Four of the seven pilots pictured here will make attempts on the transcontinental speed records in their single seat McDonnell RF-101 Voodoos early in December. All four of the pilots picked for the run will fly from California to New York. Two will land there for a one way record attempt. The remaining two will return without landing to California in an effort to establish a non-stop, round trip mark, as well as an east to west record. Left to right are: (kneeling) Captains Robert E. Burkhart, Robert M. Sweet and Ray W. Schrecengost, Jr.; (standing) Major Stanley R. Sebring, Captains Robert J. Kilpatrick, Donald D. Hawkins and Lieutenant Gus Klatt. All are members of the 363d Tactical Reconnaissance Wing at Shaw AFB, S. C.

AF Academy Vacancies For Airmen And Soldiers

Air Force and Army members have a special opportunity to compete for cadet vacancies at the USAF Academy.

In the next class entering in June 1958, 36 vacancies have been set aside for Regular and Reserve members of the two Services.

Airmen or soldiers interested in applying for the competition to fill these vacancies should submit their applications as soon as possible, Academy officials say. The Academy will accept applications until 31 January but earlier submission is desirable.

To apply for the Regular and Reserve competition, an applicant must complete DD Form 786 and submit it to his organization commander. Information to be included in the application is explained in AFR 53-10 and AR 350-58.

A total of 448 cadets will enter the next class at the Academy's temporary site on Lowry AFB, Colo. The Academy is scheduled to move to its permanent site near Colorado Springs, Colo., later in 1958.

The AF Academy requires that an applicant be at least 17 and not yet 22 years old on 1 July 1958, a male citizen of the United States, morally and physically fit, not less than 5 feet 4 inches and not more than 6 feet 4 inches, and never have been married.

An applicant for a Regular or Reserve component vacancy must have completed 12 months of service by 1 July 1958.

Army Generals Move

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Ward, Medical Holding Detachment, Walter Reed AH, Washington, D. C., has been assigned to the Office of the Comptroller of the Army, Washington, D. C. He reports this month.

Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Kelleher, Assistant Division Commander for Administration, 101st Airborne Division, goes to Hq., U. S. Army Training Center (Engineer), Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., in December.

Despite '56 Law, Families Can Not Ship Autos Privately; Must Leave To Military

Military families are on notice that they cannot privately ship their automobiles to an overseas port on change of station and be reimbursed later.

Shipments of automobiles must be handled officially by the Services to all destinations. Despite a 1956 law which allows private shipments, the Department of Defense and individual services plan to retain control of all such arrangements.

Feeling among the Services is that they can keep a tighter control over shipping rates and schedules under their present regulation.

In an opinion denying reimbursement to CWO Casimir Michinowicz, attached to the U. S. Army Mission in Cuba, the Comptroller noted that such reimbursement has been authorized by Congress under P.L. 538, approved 28 May 1956, but not promulgated through "appropriate implementing regulations."

The act provides that "notwithstanding any other provision of law, privately owned American shipping services may be utilized for the transportation of motor vehicles owned by Government personnel whenever transportation of such vehicles at Government expense is otherwise authorized by law."

The effect of this law, the Comptroller says, "is to authorize, in addition to government-owned vessels, the use of American commercial vessels for overseas shipment of privately owned vehicles of military personnel, which will, of course, entail payment of commercial freight charges."

Department of Defense sources say this act has been implemented, but only so far as to allow shipments of privately owned automobiles on contracted ships of the Military Sea Transport Service. They cited figures to show that 60,000 privately owned cars have traveled commercially owned ships chartered MSTs.

Pentagon officials say that the military services themselves, through the MSTs, can contract the privately owned ships to transport these autos to areas not served by government owned or chartered vessels. Notice to this effect implementing the 1956 law, was sent to commanders in the last week of May 1956.

However, Defense Department sources say, under the current regulations an individual may not make his own arrangements and be reimbursed at a later date.

In the current case, CWO Michinowicz was ordered to duty with the U. S. Army Mission in Cuba. He and his family answered the port call at Miami, Fla., for transportation of privately owned vehicles at Government expense.

There was no Government-owned vessel available to ship his automobile from Miami to Havana.

The record of the case shows that Mr. Michinowicz specifically indicated he had a private automobile for shipment, and that the Commanding Officer of the Brooklyn Army Terminal had directed him to proceed to Miami for water transportation to Havana.

The automobile was shipped along with him on the SS Florida, at a personal cost of $53.50.

To obtain shipments at Government expense Mr. Michinowicz would have had to deposit his car at an Army Ocean terminal such as New York or New Orleans, where the military authorities could take charge of shipping arrangements. Military agencies have no facilities for handling private autos at the Miami port.

NEXT WEEK—

MEDI-CARE BIRTHDAY. The widely heralded Armed Forces Medical Care Program that has provided hospital benefits for thousands of military families will be one year old 7 December. Next week's issue of THE JOURNAL will feature a comprehensive report on the record scored in its first year, in cooperation with the civilian physicians, hospitals, and insurance companies throughout the country. There will be a discussion of some problems that have developed notably in the area of curtailed dental care for families in the United States.

NATO AT NORFOLK. Headquarters of the Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic, with its staff of officers from our Allied Navies, is located at Norfolk, Va. Next week's JOURNAL will tell how this key element of NATO's defenses—the only permanent NATO set-up in the United States, operates and how it keeps the Navies of the free world ready to keep the Atlantic open for the defense of both North America and Europe.

SYMBOLIZING PAST GLORY of American Infantrymen, this uniform from the War of 1812 is worn by Lt. J. F. Young, USA, at a Ft. Benning parade honoring the 3d Infantry Division on its Birthday 21 November. Lieutenant Young is a member of the 1st Battalion, 7th Infantry, descendant of the old 7th Infantry Regiment which fought under General Andrew Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans in 1815. The uniform was one of eight representing periods in the 3d Division's history.

ADC AWARDS FOR ATOMIC WEAPONS WORK

The two officers described as "most responsible" for the attainment of an atomic capability for the Air Defense Command has been named for the Legion of Merit.

Col. Sidney C. Bruce, Chief of the Atomic Energy Division under the Director of Requirements, Headquarters ADC, and Maj. Norman B. Bodinger, Chief of the Nuclear Weapons Branch, Directorate of Plans, Deputy for Plans, Headquarters ADC, have been cited for the honor.

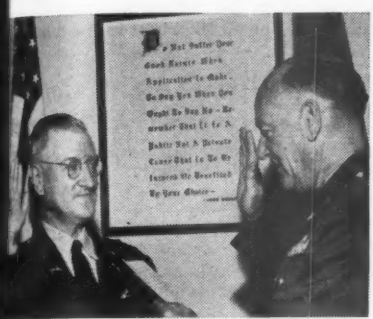

Among numerous accomplishments, they are cited for their initiation of a live firing of the MB-1—first atomic warhead air-to-air rocket—their arrangements for air and ground observers of the tests, and their proposal of and personal participation in the famous "Ground Zero" demonstration. Colonel Bruce, Major Bodinger and three other officers stood under the MB-1 detonation without special protection of any kind, to evidence to both military and the public the safety of such weapons for ground personnel.

Myers, ATC commander, during a ceremony at which General Brandt was presented the second Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit, for service while commander of TechTAF, from January, 1955, to this July. General Brandt assumed his position at ATC in August.

ARMY'S NEW PROVOST — Maj. Gen. Haydon L. Boatner, left, takes the oath of office as Army Provost Marshal General from Maj. Gen. Herbert M. Jones, The Adjutant General. General Boatner comes to the Pentagon from duty as Chief of the U. S. military mission to Greece. He succeeds Maj. Gen. William M. Maglin, USA-Ret.

Pentagon Set To Rush Pay Bill To Budget Bureau For Approval

From first page—
There has been considerable discussion concerning the six per cent pay boost for retired people.
Authoritative information is that a high-level decision has been made to the pay adjustments for retired military personnel to the forthcoming pay adjustment for civilian employees.
The civilian pay plan, now receiving top Administration review, is said to provide a minimum six per cent increase, with increased raises at higher echelons, comparable to the military pay bill.
There have been reports that the Defense Department might decide to delay implementation of the enlisted proficiency pay plan, pending Congressional action on the forthcoming legislation.
Late this week, the Defense Department was studying proposed rules from the Services, and it appeared that a go-ahead would be given to start the proficiency pay plan about the first of the year.
However, there were indications that the Services might not be able to make the first promotion under the proficiency pay scheme before 1 March.
That the $560 million pay raise will get quick approval at the Budget Bureau and White House is assured. First of all, President Eisenhower has called for a military pay adjustment in a number of public statements.
The Pentagon's top fiscal authority, Assistant Secretary W. J. McNeil, said last week (see Page 27) that the cost of the forthcoming pay raise will more than offset manpower savings in 1958.
And on top of this came the powerful testimony before the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee this week concerning the need for a "professional" military force of skilled specialists.

Mobile "TEW" Line Ready For Marines

A new, highly portable, tactical early warning (TEW) system—which the Defense Department said "promises to extend radically the nation's tactical defense perimeters" is being developed for the U. S. Marine Corps by Sperry Gyroscope Company.
The long-range, search and height-finding radar system will detect close-in or distant high-speed, enemy aircraft and missiles.
The light-weight system is designed to satisfy the Marines' requirement for helicopter transportable equipment, adaptable to rapidly changing tactical situations in any environment.
The AN/MPS-21 radar system described as the first of comparable size and weight to provide three-dimensional data at extreme ranges, can be quickly transported by helicopter, cargo-type aircraft, truck or amphibious vehicle. The system may be brought into operation in a battle area within a two-hour period. "This transportable 'TEW' system which can detect enemy aircraft or missiles at altitudes and distances in excess of any presently existing or contemplated tactical system, is in keeping with the Marine Corps' tradition of hard-hitting mobility," a Headquarters spokesman said.
The spokesman revealed that Sperry's Surface Armament Division was awarded the contract by the Navy's Bureau of Ships to develop the new equipment. This research and development contract, one of the largest ever granted for such Marine Corps equipment, indicates its importance to the Marines.
The light-weight MPS-21 system, using miniaturized components, is about one-quarter the size and weight of conventional radar systems, yet has extended the detection range and accuracy to pick up missile-like supersonic targets at extreme distances. The equipment also is capable of high accurate height determination to its maximum detection range. By incorporating detection and height determination, this equipment is capable of replacing two present radar systems.

"Professional" Armed Forces Advocated By Dr. Teller; Cites Need For Specialists

ment expenditures.
4—Establish better cooperation and exchange of information among the Armed Forces. "Competition, which is generally good, should not be carried to the point where we are keeping secrets from each other."
5—Share our scientific information with our allies. "We cannot fully cooperate unless we share our secrets." The danger of not cooperating "is much greater" than the danger we risk of losing some of our secrets.
Dr. Teller said there are two other ways in which we can bolster our defenses.
"We must be prepared to strike back if we are hit. And we must be prepared in such a way that our ability will not be destroyed by a surprise attack." He said we must continue to strengthen and disperse our retaliatory forces, particularly the Strategic Air Command; improve our warning system, and be prepared to strike back with missiles.
Our "passive" or civil defense also must be bolstered, he said, so we "can get back on our feet" in case we suffer a surprise attack. He said shelters should be prepared against fall-out and fire; radiation meters should be mass-produced; we should provide "a well-hidden nest egg with which to rebuild our industry"; our excess food stocks should be distributed throughout the country in safe storage so that they will be readily available if needed.
Such a program, he said, is one "which a rich country like the United States can undertake."
Concerning our scientific endeavors, Doctor Teller said the "main danger" is that "the Russians are catching up with us and are passing us in certain fields." Their rate of advance, he said, "is considerably faster than ours," and they have built up their scientific manpower "on an extremely broad front" both in the applied and basic sciences.

is acquired and most of our people have not acquired it." He said science is considered "highbrow" in the United States, the scientist looked upon "as a person apart," and in our schools, the child who is interested in science "is ridiculed."
Dr. Teller suggested that scientific instruction in our elementary and high schools should be overhauled, and salaries of science teachers increased. Talent and genius, he said, "are nothing but specialized interest." This interest can be either spontaneous or latent but in either case "it sometimes needs to be stimulated," and such stimulus can be supplied by providing good science instruction in our schools.
He said it is "most urgent" that we improve our scientific education and popularize science. The scientist, "even the young scientist, the 12-year-old," he said, certainly should "get as much admiration as a football player."
Russia's recent satellite launchings show that the USSR is "far along" in both the satellite and ballistic missile fields, Doctor Teller said. He added that the satellite launchings convince him the Russians either already have an intercontinental ballistic missile or "they will have in a rather short time."
They also have "closed the gap" in numerous other fields such as nuclear weapons, aircraft production, and radar, he said. Since the end of WWII, he told the Committee, the Russians "have worked much faster and more effectively in all fields of technology. In a few more years they will leave us behind."
The "immediate danger," he said, is in the missiles race. But this does not mean we should "embark on a drastic reorganization" of our entire missile program. Such a step "could rock the boat," he cautioned.
We should strive, he said, to speed up the completion dates of the missiles which already are planned. And, we should expand the entire program by providing more funds and by working "on all kinds of things" that will aid in the development of the next generation of missiles and space vehicles.
If possible, more overtime should be utilized, he said, and more companies should be drawn into the effort.
He said he would hesitate to shut down any of the current efforts because "all of the various projects can be used if enough imagination is supplied," and shutdowns "might result in more disorder than speed." All of our efforts in the rocketry field "have been excellent," he said, but "Russia's efforts have been better" and we should give more thought to better coordination and elimination of duplication.

Service people can expect that before the pay legislation is passed, changes will be made, probably lowering the pricetag.
Some efforts undoubtedly will be made to scuttle the carefully devised Cordiner Plan in favor of an across-the-board percentage increase.
They will stress the need for revamping outdated military pay systems, based on longevity, in favor of the "pay for merit" approach urged by President Ralph J. Cordiner of the General Electric Company and his associates on the pay study committee.

He said he has never subscribed to the popular belief that most of the Russian scientific advances have been the work of German scientists spirited into the USSR following WWII. The "main job," he said, has been performed by the Russians themselves.
The Russian scientist, he said, receives top compensation, is highly respected and honored, and, "to some extent even understood by the general public." The young boy in Russia is attracted to the scientific field in much the same manner as young girls in the United States are attracted to the movie industry, he added.
Asked to compare this treatment with the treatment accorded scientists in the United States, Doctor Teller reminded the Committee that "the taste for science

Fourteen At Pease Join 1000 Hour Club

Capt. Delmont Allen, a B-47 Stratojet pilot of the 349th Bomb Squadron and Maj. Emmitt W. Kelly, an observer of the 350th Bomb Squadron, head the group of 14 officers of the 100th Bombardment Wing at Pease AFB, N. H., who have received membership in the newly adopted SAC B-47 1,000 Hour Club.
Col. Charles Wimberly, Deputy Commander of the 100th Bomb Wing, presented the awards during recent ceremonies.
Captain Allen has 2,475 hours to his credit and Major Kelly has logged 1,523 hours.
Col. Ralph W. Stanley, Chief of Flying Safety for SAC recently announced that 1,475 SAC fliers would receive the award which is a joint venture of SAC and the Boeing Airplane Company, builders of the B-47 Stratojet.
To receive the award, recipients must have completed at least 1,000 hours flying time in the B-47 medium-bomber or its twin sister, the RB-47 reconnaissance airplane, prior to 1 September.
Other base officers who received the award were: pilots; 349th Bomb Squadron; Lt. Col. Ray C. Stubblefield, 1,017 hours, and Capt. James Craven, 1,095 hours. 350th Bomb Squadron; Maj. William T. Preston, 1,796 hours; Maj. Jack A. Wells, 1,588 hours and Capt. Douglas H. Frost, 1,696 hours. 351st Bomb Squadron; Maj. Herbert F. Briggs, 1,864 hours; Capt. William E. Young, 1,162 hours and Capt. Donald L. Richissin, 1,192 hours.

Observers receiving the award were: 350th Bomb Squadron; Maj. James E. Dunn, 1,370 hours. 351st Bomb Squadron; Maj. Howard P. Hall, 1,253 hours; Maj. Robert W. Weekly, 1,099 hours and Maj. Charles L. Vaughn, 1,247 hours.
Latest figures reveal that Maj. Briscoe S. Barrett, 338th Strat Reconnaissance Squadron, Forbes AFB, Kans., tops the list with 2,782 hours.
Second Air Force leads the Command in total members with 638 men. Eighth Air Force has 446 recipients and the 15th Air Force has 367. At SAC Headquarters, 24 former crew members now assigned to staff positions, also became members.
MacDill AFB, Fla., home of the first two B-47 wings, has the largest number of any base with a figure of 150.

SALUTE TO SUPERINTENDENT—Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker presented the Meritorious Service Award 17 Nov. at Wayne, Pa., to Lt. Gen. Milton G. Baker, Valley Forge Military Academy Superintendent. General Baker received the award for "devotion and accomplishments" as Chairman of the Defense Department's Reserve Forces Policy Board from September 1955 to September 1957. Secretary Brucker made the presentation after a regimental review of the academy's 850-member Corps of Cadets.

U. S. Army*MISSILE BADGE

The Army announced it has approved a qualification badge to recognize personnel who qualify as basic, first class, and expert missilemen.

The badge, in the form of a component bar inscribed with the word "Missile," will be attached to the appropriate basic qualification badge.

The Army said, "Award of these badges will be based on demonstrated individual proficiency under criteria which will be made available in Army publications. The criteria have not yet been established."

Col. Pruitt Chief Consultant

Col. Francis W. Pruitt, Chief of the Department of Medicine at Walter Reed Army Hospital, Washington, D. C., has been assigned as Chief Medical Consultant in the Professional Division, Office of the Army Surgeon General, Washington, D. C.

Colonel Pruitt is married to the former Mae E. Olson of Little Falls, Minn., who was, before their marriage, a member of the Army Nurse Corps. The Pruitts have two sons, Thomas 5, and William 4.

Extension Courses Shifted To Benning

Army extension pre-commissioned courses previously offered by seven branch service schools have been transferred to the Department of Non-Resident Instruction of the U. S. Army School at Ft. Benning, Ga.

The seven schools include the Medical Field Service, Signal Corps, Engineer Corps, Army Security Agency, Adjutant General, Chemical Corps and Provost Marshal General Schools.

Previously, enrollees in Army extension courses for pre-commission study received instruction from their branch service school.

Forty-two thousand military personnel are enrolled in the pre-commission course and 9,326 are enrolled in company grade officer and advanced officer extension course at Ft. Benning.

Courses in the Army extension program offers to military personnel progressive, non-resident military education for all components of the Army. Enrollment in the courses is offered to officers, warrant officers and enlisted men.

The completion of the pre-commission series does not grant a commission as an officer in the Army, and is not a mandatory requirement for the granting of a commission. However, National Guard and Reserve units can prescribe the course as a step toward the enlisted man qualifying for a commission.

The average time for completion of the pre-commission course is two-years. Members of the National Guard and Army Reserve are granted on one retirement point for each three hours of credit earned through Army extension courses. These retirement points apply only to members of National Guard or Reserve units and not to members of the Regular Army.

ARADCOM Plans Chief

Lt. Col. Richard J. Titley has been appointed chief of the Plans Division in the Plans and Requirements Section at Army Air Defense Command Headquarters, Ent AFB, Colo.

Colonel Titley attended the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., before his ARADCOM assignment.

Capt. Robert J. Hammell has been assigned as ARADCOM troop information officer.

FINAL SALUTE

The Army Air Defense Command's "Commander's Gun Battalion Trophy" has been retired by the 16th AAA Gun Battalion, Ft. Banks, Mass.

There will be no trophy competition in 1958, because the Army is inactivating most of its AAA gun units. They will be replaced by the Nike guided missile forces.

The 16th is commanded by Maj. Vincent McManus. His unit has won it for two years running.

Col. Mabee Brigade Deputy

Col. Richard W. Mabee has been named Deputy Commander of the School Brigade at Ft. Benning, Ga., after a tour as Army attache in Helsinki, Finland.

WHAT IS SPACE?

Some 500 miles above the earth, a few solitary molecules of atmosphere are the final "land's end" of our small island in space—the outer reef beyond which lies an immense cosmic ocean so inconceivable that men had to invent a symbol ( $\infty$ ) to denote it.

How vast is this ocean, and what lies beyond our shores?

First, our own sea of stars: This is a giant wheel-shaped galaxy containing some 300 billion stars. Imagine a speck the size of a dust particle on the spoke of a cosmic carriage wheel 1,000 miles in diameter. This is the relative size of our sun, one small life-giving star in the great procession. And beyond our galaxy, at least 100 million more such galactic systems are telescopically visible. The "weather" of this cosmic ocean is composed of strange storms of cosmic radiation, distant clouds of interstellar gas, violent geomagnetic tides and currents, sudden showers of meteoric dust.

It is this weather that we first seek to understand. Much needs to be learned about cosmic rays, the nature of gravity, the physics of light, the true chemistry of "nothingness," the temperature of space, and the movements of the atmosphere on our small island below.

Our first few hundred miles voyage into space will be an infinitesimal step into the 600 billion billion miles of the visible eternity surrounding us.

L/G McCaul Moves To Corps No. 2 Slot

Lt. Gen. Verne J. McCaul drops his titles of Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps for Air and Director of Aviation and moves into the Corps' number two slot as Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps on 1 December.

The consolidation of the two offices, recommended by General Randolph McC. Pate, Marine Corps Commandant, and approved by President Eisenhower, provides a line of succession from the Commandant to the Assistant Commandant to the Chief of Staff.

Under the old structure, the functions of the Chief of Staff were combined with those of Assistant Commandant.

Concurrent with General McCaul's change of title, Maj. Gen. Robert E. Hogaboom, Deputy Chief of Staff, moves up to the Chief of Staff slot with three-star rank. Later, the Office of Director of Aviation will be set up as a separate office and occupied by Maj. Gen. Samuel S. Jack, Deputy Commander, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific.

Lt. Gen. Vernon E. Megee, Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps and Chief of Staff under the old structure, has assumed duties as Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific.

USMC Air Generals Get Expanded Duties

Brig. Gen. Edward C. Dyer, Commanding General, MCAS Cherry Point, N. C., and Brig. Gen. Frank H. Wirsig, Commanding General, El Toro, Calif., have been given new titles and expanded responsibilities.

General Dyer's new title is Commanding General, Marine Corps Air Bases, Eastern Area. His counterpart on the West Coast is known as Commanding General, Marine Corps Air Bases, Western Area.

Generals Dyer and Wirsig retain their original titles as collateral duty.

Within their areas, the commanders exercise military jurisdiction over all aviation shore activities providing services to air units of the Fleet Marine Forces. In addition, they are responsible for all services rendered by the units.

LCdr. Viola Sanders Due Deputy Post

LCdr. Viola B. Sanders will replace Cdr. Eleanor J. Sowers as Deputy to Captain Winifred R. Quick, Director of the WAVES in February. Commander Sowers' next assignment has not as yet been announced.

The Deputy-designate has been selected for Commander.

A graduate of Delta State Teachers College, Cleveland, Mississippi, Miss Sanders was commissioned as Ensign in the Navy in 1943.

Marine Corps Studies Super Sea Planes; "Need To Have," Replaces "Nice To Have"

MASSIVE aerial troop carriers—capable of transporting a completely-equipped company, together with its small vehicles and enough supplies for three days—may be added to the striking power of the Marine Corps of the future.

Maj. Gen. Henry R. Paige, Marine Corps G-4, told THE JOURNAL that the Corps "is following the development of flying LST's—large seaplane transports—such as those being developed and tested by the Martin and Convair Companies."

The General said the Corps "is interested in the SeaMaster," and is looking into the SeaMistress design on Martin's drawing boards. "The SeaMaster, still in the testing stage," he said, "showed remarkable characteristics," while the SeaMistress "looks as though it may have possibilities."

The Martin Company, producers of the Navy P6M jet seaplane SeaMaster, states that if a contract were awarded for a SeaMistress (a larger version of the SeaMaster), the company would be able to produce a roll-out model within two years and build them at the rate of four to five a month. Each plane, powered by eight to 10 jet engines, would cost about $5 million.

At present, Marine Corps Tactical Transport Squadrons are equipped with Fairchild R4Q Packet assault cargo and personnel transport planes. The land-based R4Q carries a payload of 12,000 pounds for a radius of 500 miles. The cargo compartment is 30x9x8 feet in which more than 40 combat-ready Leathernicks can be carried. The plane is 86½ feet long and has a wing-span of 109 feet.

Intermediate plans in the land-based transport plane field call for replacement of the R4Q with a Marine Corps version of Lockheed's C-130 Hercules. This plane has seating spaces for 92 combat-equipped Marines. The seats, however, can be moved to make room for 124 men. The plane has a range of 3,400 nautical miles.

"Another possible entry into the Marine Corps water-borne transport field," General Paige said, is the Convair R3 Tradewind which may become a Navy logistics aircraft. Known as the "Flying LST," the Tradewind's design gross weight is 160,000 pounds.

During the past year, the Marine Corps has used the R3Y in a number of its combat problems to test its performance. The plane, 139 feet long and has a wing-span of 146 feet, can carry as many as 80 leathernicks to 4000 mile distances at speeds up to 340 miles per hour. During one problem, a Tradewind discharged an entire Division Reconnaissance Company onto a beach through its clam-shell door.

Land-based transports, which are organic to the Marine Aviation, also are used to back up combat troops either by air-dropping heavy support weapons and equipment or landing supplies when fields are seized.

All water-borne transports are operated by the Navy.

Introduction of advanced water-based transport planes, General Paige emphasized, will not mean the end of the helicopter in the Marine Corps "since we couldn't afford to be restricted to beaches and inland water-ways."

The General explained that under the Corps' Vertical Envelopment doctrine "the need for a balanced force is essential." One of the major advantages of employing helicopters under the Vertical Envelopment technique, he said, "is that terrain doesn't govern the attacking force."

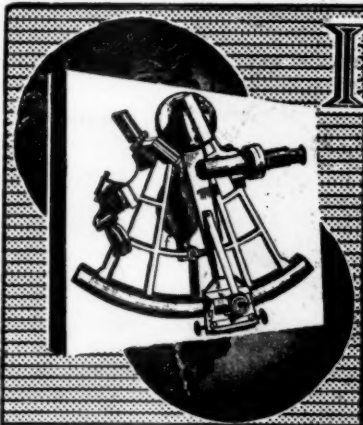

Swift-moving helicopters, flying over moving assault ships, are able to bypass heavily defended areas and take advantage of an enemy's weakness.

While the Corps is interested in improving its transport and cargo-carrying ability, General Paige said, improved and newer water-borne air transports "will not revolutionize the Corps' concept of."

Air Force Closes
Greenland Base

The Air Force base at Narsarsuaq, Greenland, has been deactivated.

A small caretaker detachment with approximately 50 personnel remains to safeguard equipment and provide fire protection for buildings.

The base, on the southern tip of Greenland, was built in 1941 and was used as a clearing stop on the air ferry route to England.

After the war, the base was deactivated and used only as an emergency air field for European flights. It was reactivated in 1950 as a refueling base for military aircraft in the ferrying chain from the U. S. to Northern Europe.

Approximately 1,000 military and civilian personnel were stationed there prior to the decision to close the base.

Safety Chief Cites All-Time Low For USAF

The Air Force accident rate is at an all-time low. But much work remains to be done in the accident prevention field, Maj. Gen. Joseph D. Caldara, USAF Director of Flight Safety Research, told delegates to the 31st Air Force-Aircraft Industry Conference 21 November at Palm Springs, Calif.

The present accident rate is 14 accidents per 100,000 flying hours.

General Caldara said 285 airplanes were destroyed during the two year period ending 30 June 1957.

Cited as the primary cause of 150 aircraft mishaps during the two year period were failures and malfunctions of brakes, drag chutes, wheels and tires. In addition, he said, these factors contributed to 135 accident cases during the period.

The conferees also heard presentations by: Mr. John A. Zolovcik, of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Langley AFB, Va.; Mr. J. L. Edman of Bendix Aviation Corp., South Bend, Ind.; Mr. M. P. Hershey, Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio; Mr. Kenneth E. French, the Irving Air Chute Co., Glendale, Cal.; Mr. John L. Hall, Curtiss-Wright Corp., Caldwell, N. J.; and Mr. C. J. Daniel and David McAllister, All-American Engineering Co., Wilmington, Del.

Col. J. G. Foster Heads
Shaw RB-66 School

An Advanced Flying Training School for RB-66 reconnaissance pilots has opened at Shaw AFB, S. C.

Commandant is Col. John G. Foster, Commander of the 432d Tactical Reconnaissance Group.

Students come from all major air commands. Some are experienced bomber pilots. Others report direct from jet flying school.

The eight-week course includes five days with the RB-66 Mobile Training Detachment School for familiarization with the aircraft; intensive schooling in aerial photography, reconnaissance procedures, intelligence and photo interpretation.

After "flights" in the RB-66 simulator, students report to the 41st Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron where they put into practice what they have learned in ground training.

Trying to save a $10 bill could cost you thousands
 like these...

Accidents can happen anytime, anywhere. Your golf ball strikes the caddy... your bullet hits another hunter... your children break a neighbor's picture window... your wife scalds a guest with hot coffee... your dog bites the mailman... the milkman breaks a leg on your back porch. These accidents, and many more, can result in costly judgments that may run into the thousands.

Now for the first time, USAA, serving the Armed Forces officer with low cost automobile insurance since 1922, makes available

THE USAA COMPREHENSIVE PERSONAL LIABILITY POLICY

With this new CPL policy you get financial protection against everyday accidents that might happen at or away from your home. Accidents that might injure another person or through negligence cause damage to the property of others.

For as little as $10 a year you can have the new CPL policy giving you $10,000 liability coverage and meeting medical payments up to $250. For less than three cents a day additional cost liability coverage of $50,000 can be provided and medical payments coverage increased to $1,000. Higher limits are also available at nominal cost as are many additional coverages.

USAA employs no agents. It is a non-profit insurance association under the direction of active and retired officers of the Armed Services. All selling is by mail and the resulting savings are passed on to policyholders. USAA affiliated claims services are located in all areas where the CPL policy is offered.

Don't delay. Write today for application blank and descriptive folder of the new USAA Comprehensive Personal Liability Policy. Be protected from costly every day accidents.

The USAA Membership is limited to active and retired officers, cadets, and warrant officers of the following Services of the United States of America: Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Public Health Service, Coast and Geodetic Survey; officers and warrant officers of the National Guard and the Reserve components, when ordered to extended active Federal duty and as long as they retain their commissions, and Foreign Service Officers of the Department of State. The widows of such officers and warrant officers may insure with USAA so long as their status is not changed by remarriage.

"A Highly Professional Military Force."

The pay plan of the Cordiner Committee should get a strong boost in Congressional circles from the testimony given 25 November by Dr. Edward Teller, the distinguished physicist. Dr. Teller (see story on first page of this issue) contends that our survival depends upon the development of a "highly professional military force."

Our military services, he points out, are becoming more highly technical and to keep them efficient we must develop professional services made up of many high grade specialists.

This, one recognizes, is the heart of the Cordiner Report and it is to retain and develop these career specialists and technicians that the Cordiner Committee recommends a complete overhauling of our system of military pay with substantially increased financial rewards for those who stay in the Services and progress in skills and knowledge.

The Department of Defense, with the encouragement of the President, is now working on the draft of legislation which it will propose to the Bureau of the Budget to begin the implementation of the Cordiner plan. As Mr. Cordiner, the committee's chairman, has said in the past, watered-down, partial versions will not do the job. Congress must have the entire project before it, hear the pros and cons from members of the Services, and then determine on the basis of need—not original cost—what is necessary to put an effective career incentive plan to work.

Inter-Service Understanding. With all the current talk of the evils of inter-service rivalry, a great deal of good could be accomplished if the most vociferous of the critics, particularly those in Congress, could be taken on a tour of the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va. At that top-level institution they would find the closest approach to Service integration—an activity where officers of each of the Armed Forces learn to understand and respect the views and convictions of those of the other components of the National Defense team. (See story on Pages 1 and 11 of this issue.)

When an officer completes the five and a half month course at this College, he has become personally acquainted—on a first name basis—with at least 126 student officers of Services other than his own. He has worked on joint military planning and operation problems with every one of them, has found a basis for an equitable and satisfactory solution for each. During the rest of his career he will carry a mental picture of these fellow students and it will assist him in finding the answers to future inter-service problems that may come to him.

While the Armed Forces Staff College is an outstanding current example of the building of inter-service appreciation, there is more of this mutual understanding than Congress or the public comprehends. The other top level schools, the National War College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces (see story in last week's JOURNAL) foster this spirit. But, less known, is the amount of cross-servicing in the schools and activities of the individual services. The Army Language School, for example, (see story in THE JOURNAL of 9 November), has large numbers of students from every service working and learning together. Each of the service schools, such as the Air University, the Army War College, the Navy War College, has officers of the other services on its faculty and among its student bodies.

The Services would gain in public respect and appreciation if there were wider knowledge of the extent to which cross-servicing and mutual understanding already exists and is being further built up.

SATURDAY, 30 NOVEMBER 1957

Defense Through Education. Duke University has announced a special program for Retired Officers of the Armed Services leading to the Degree of Master of Arts in Teaching with major in mathematics. Purdue University already has initiated special classes to prepare Retired Officers for positions as teachers of mathematics.

The importance of such a program to the future security of the nation may be readily realized in light of the critical shortages in scientists and engineers—existing and anticipated for some years. Dr. Edward Teller, atomic scientist, Dr. James R. Killian, jr., Special Assistant to the President, and many others, contend that the stumbling block to the development of more scientists goes back to the failure of students to get sufficient mathematics at the high school level. Educators say this stems largely from the shortage of math teachers, particularly those who can make the subject interesting and attractive to students.

What better source of qualified math teachers could be found than among those who have served in the Armed Services where mathematics is so important? Furthermore these officers could make the subject come alive and be of interest to the youth of our schools.

The Duke course will take approximately one calendar year with the first session beginning 21 July 1958. For those not eligible for G.I. benefits the cost will be between $915 and $940 for two semesters of 125 hours each plus 14 weeks over two summers; a total of 36 credit hours will be provided.

In light of the importance of this program to the future security of the nation, it would seem that the payment of any college fees for this purpose should be borne by the Government.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (29 Nov. 1947)—The disparity between Service pay and the average pay of other citizens was brought sharply into focus this week when the President in his address to Congress called attention to the fact that "in terms of actual purchasing power, the average income of individuals, after taxes, has risen 39 per cent" since 1929, and then added that the average cost for all living items has risen 23 per cent. Yet since 1929, the actual pay of commissioned officers has risen only 10 per cent in the field grades and 15 per cent in the company grades.

50 Years Ago (30 Nov. 1907)—Officers who are endeavoring to persuade their fellow officers to contribute to a fund to urge measures on their behalf upon the attention of Congress are treading on dangerous ground. So far as their action antagonizes the wishes of the authorities at Washington, it will be held to be in violation of Regulations. It is at least open to doubt whether such action will not be more likely to injure them with Congress than to help them.

90 Years Ago (30 Nov. 1867)—The Indian difficulties are not yet settled. The Sioux which, with the Cheyennes, have been engaged in nine-tenths of the hostilities of the past twelve months, have not made peace. The former deliberately avoided the Peace Commission at Fort Laramie, and the latter made a peace at the North Platte conditioned that they should still be allowed to infest the roads which so long have been the scenes of their maraudings.

(Letters to the Editor must have author's name and address, but name will be omitted on publication if writer so states. Longer letters may be extracted for publication.)

War Orphans Act

Editor, THE JOURNAL:
Perhaps the following may enlighten some of your readers regarding the now famous "War Orphans Act."

I am the widow of a Regular Navy commander, an aviator for twenty years. He was killed in a plane explosion while on active duty at Coco Solo in 1949.

I have a 16-year-old boy and a twenty-year-old daughter, now a college junior. These children are not entitled to any educational benefits at all, as my husband was inconveniently killed in the wrong year. Even though he was on constant active duty through war and peace years, with an enviable record through his entire Navy career.

A 90-day Korean veteran could die at home, and his six children would be entitled to a college education. Mine are not! Why? If the law does not include Regular Navy children, why has there not been an amendment made? This is so unfair to many widows and Navy juniors.

It surely is discouraging to look around and see benefits welcomed by so many prosperous and slightly disabled veterans.

"Sound Military ideas?" Sure—for the ones who benefit.

A REGULAR NAVY WIDOW

Justice For Retired

Editor, THE JOURNAL:
Secretary McElroy has shown a praiseworthy sense of fair play in his decision to support a pay increase for all of us on the retired list.

In my opinion, the Pentagon should stick to the principle of giving retired people equal benefits with those on the active list. I hope a strong case is made for this in Congress.

But in the meantime, we can take heart from the fact the new Secretary feels that retired people are entitled at least to a six per cent cost-of-living increase.

It was a shocking blow when you revealed last Spring that Secretary Wilson said that retired people didn't deserve a pay increase.

COLONEL, USAF-RET.

RIF Lowers Morale

Editor, THE JOURNAL:
I note from last week's JOURNAL that the number of protests being made to Congress may result in that body taking some steps to temper the blow to the shorn officer.

Good—but a little late. From what I hear from others around me the sweeping reduction in force has sunk service morale to a new low. What good does it do me, these officers ask each other, to try to complete a full tour of active duty when others who planned on doing so, and were given what amounted to assurance that they would be able to do so, are now being Riffed off active duty just short of completing their time for retirement.

What this means is that all who can reasonably do so will keep a weather eye open for a good job in a civilian career. Of course we will lose our best officers this way, but that's the way the government seems to operate its military personnel management.

SAD, BUT NOT YET SACKED

Officers Of All Services Work, Live And Play As One At Armed Forces Staff College

and the NATO War College in Paris, told THE JOURNAL's representative that while there he talked with many officers of the various Services who had graduated from the Armed Forces Staff College before their current assignment. The AFSC Commandant sought to find out from them wherein their AFSC training had been of help and how it might be improved in the future. For this purpose he left with them various papers and asked them to send him their maturely thought-out reactions.

Admiral Wellborn said, however, that his general impression from talking with these graduates is that they all felt that their training at the college made a very considerable contribution to the performance of their work in joint and combined planning and operations.

The greatest of the contributions, Admiral Wellborn felt, was the experience of having lived, worked and played with large numbers of officers of Services other than their own and to get to know these people on an intimate first name basis. They know their contemporaries in the other Services and understand and respect their views, even though they might be different from their own, he pointed out. Discussion of problems under such circumstances, the Admiral said, is very likely to lead to a basis for agreement.

At the Armed Forces Staff College everything works in threes so that the three components of our defense team may be equally represented. For the purpose of this division the Navy quota includes officers of the Marine Corps and, when they are members of the student body, officers of the Coast Guard and the Coast & Geodetic Survey.

THIS GROUPING BY THREES starts in the organization of the college itself. Like the other two top colleges the office of Commandant rotates among the three Services. The present Commandant, Admiral Wellborn, comes from the Navy.

Under the Commandant are three Deputies, currently Maj. Gen. A. S. Newman, USAF, Brig. Gen. H. W. Bowman, USAF, and Capt. I. J. Schwartz, USN. According to custom the Deputy who is of the same Service as the Commandant also functions as Executive, so Captain Schwartz now fills that key post.

Each of the seven Divisions are composed of equal numbers from the three Services. The Academic Planning Division, for example, is directed by Col. J. D. Nicholas, USAF, who is assisted by Capt. W. O. Spears, Jr., USN, and Col. R. D. Crosby, USA. Even the seven branches under the Secretariat are integrated service-wise, the Personnel and Administration Branch, for instance, being composed of Maj. H. W. Jones, USAF (AG), Maj. D. A. Hutchison, USA (Asst AG), and Lt. A. L. Becker, USN (Asst AG).

This Service equality extends to the student body, where there are currently 63 officers from the Army, 63 from the Air Force, and 53 from the Navy to which are added 10 from the Marine Corps, plus 15 Allied observers, and three civilians. These are the usual quotas and no substantial changes are planned for the immediate future.

IN THEIR ACADEMIC WORK this division is carried on; for a principal feature of their program are their conferences and group studies which are always done in groups of 15—five from each Service. Furthermore, while there are permanent conferences which continue through the course there are also a number of temporary groupings, changed continuously, so that at the conclusion of his course of study each officer has served on at least one conference with every other student officer of every Service in the entire student body.

Adding further to the feeling of unification is the method by which these conferences and group studies are conducted. Informality and academic freedom is the rule. A JOURNAL reporter was privileged to sit in on two of them during his visit here and he was impressed both by the intensity with which the students attacked their problems and by the fact that there was no distinction as to rank or Service—in fact it was often difficult to detect a student's status. Each had a name plate at his place at the table—but the plate had only a first or nickname, and last name—no service or rank. Furthermore most of the students were in their shirt sleeves. All were called by their first names. Some had coffee or soft drinks, many smoked. But all were keenly involved in working out the group's solution to the problem before them.

EVEN IN THEIR FAMILY QUARTERS the rule of three prevails. On the post there are 11 converted barracks made over to provide 16 family apartments each, but they are so quartered that no Service can have a predominate number in any one building. Thus they really live together.

Extra-curricular activities also are cross-serviced. There is a busy wives club, a Teen Age Club, even a place for the Tots, all inter-service in composition. The same is true of the bowling league, soft ball, tennis, squash, handball, golf, etc.

Thus, in addition to his intensive training in joint planning which he obtains here, every student leaves this college with a close understanding and friendship of at least 126 officers and families from Services other than his own. He knows how they think and act and he respects their motives and their Services.

This mission of the school, officially, is "To educate selected officers of the Armed Forces in joint and combined operations, including the organization and planning thereof." This means team work, and it would certainly appear that the work-live-play together method is well designed to achieve it.

THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION is divided into three major parts: 1) Orientation, 186 hours; 2) Joint and Combined Operations, 316 hours; and 3) Trends of War, 94 hours.

In the first part the course not only covers the Department of Defense, joint staff, general personnel problems, weapon systems evaluation, guided missiles, etc., but includes a comprehensive study of each of the services, its weapons, organization, strength etc. Included also are field trips to such key service centers as Eglin AFB, Fla., Ft. Benning, Ga., and trips on aircraft carriers and submarines.

Part two includes the five numbered problems which play such a vital part in the college's program. These are:

No. 1. Organization and Command Relationships, a 35 hour problem.

No. 2. Initial Capability Planning (Peacetime), 35 hours.

No. 3. Requirements and Capability Planning (Wartime), 38 hours.

No. 4. Tactical Planning, 24½ hours.

No. 5. Campaign Planning, 97½ hours.

On these problems the students are given less and less faculty guidance as they go along, until by the time they reach the last problem they are virtually on their own.

THE TRENDS OF WAR, final part of the course, is designed to stimulate student consideration of military trends developing under the impetus of new politico-military arrangements and new weapons and the effects of these trends on future joint and combined operations.

Academically the course is designed to instill the student with principles, not details; and to give him an objective point of view without at the same time shying away from controversial subjects of discussion. Academic freedom rules at all times. Even the members of the faculty are referred to as "faculty advisers" not as "instructors."

There are 130 lectures in the course, of which 80 are given by visitors, always including the Chiefs of Staff of the three Services. All lectures are followed by question and discussion periods.

NO GRADES ARE GIVEN on graduation. However, the student's application and accomplishment is, of course, expressed in the personnel reports made to his own service department. For this purpose his report is submitted by the Deputy Commandant representing his Service.

All of the College's training aides and academic material, study courses, etc., are prepared at the school and are under constant revision from course to course. This is necessary because no where else is exactly this type of material available and, moreover, it has to be changed frequently as new needs arise, as world conditions change, and as new weapons and techniques arise.

The College also operates a library comprising about 75,000 volumes and papers. This is in constant use for reference and study by both the student officers and the faculty.

THE SCHOOL HAD ITS START early in World War II when General Henry H. Arnold, then Chief of Staff of the Army Air Force, recommended the establishment of a "school for joint staffs." The JCS approved the plan and the Army and Navy Staff College was opened 12 May 1943 in Washington, D. C.

After the War the Joint Chiefs of Staff approved the establishment of a permanent school for joint operations training. This became the Armed Forces Staff College and it was set up here at Norfolk, Va., occupying buildings formerly used as barracks and receiving station by the Navy. A war-time motion picture theater was converted into an auditorium for the college.

The Norfolk site was officially a "temporary" one until last year, when, after many studies of various other sites, the Norfolk location was designated permanent.

The buildings here, however, are all converted structures, not designed for their purpose and in many cases difficult to utilize efficiently. The space, too, is cramped.

There are only 52 acres here now, while 100 are considered desirable for the College. However, arrangements have been made to provide enough additional land to give the college 75 acres.

DESIGNS FOR NEW BUILDINGS have been completed. The entire layout would cost $13,600,000. The most important structure is the Academic Building providing space for the administration, the faculty, lecture halls, conference rooms, study rooms, etc. This is estimated to cost $4,500,000.

This building project has been approved by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and will be proposed for inclusion in the fiscal year 1959 budget.

With the completion of the proposed new building program, the Armed Forces Staff College would have a physical plant capable of carrying out to the fullest extent its vital and important contribution to the defense of the United States and her allies in the free world.

THE DEFENSE DEPARTMENT NOW PERMITS "policy" security clearance of speeches by military chiefs which suggest the need for increased expenditures. General Taylor was able to tell the National Defense Transportation Association last week that the Army is "waiting impatiently" for new weapons for its reorganized units. General Pate said, "we don't have the personnel strength we would like to have, nor do we have all the dollars we think we need, but within these limitations—men and money limitations—the Marine Corps is maintaining the high level of readiness that the American public is entitled to expect of us."

DON'T BE SURPRISED if Dr. Paul D. Foote, serving a recess appointment as Assistant SecDef for Research and Engineering, decides to leave the Pentagon. A large part of his responsibilities will be placed under the Single Manager for future weapons, soon to be named by Secretary McElroy and reporting directly to the Secretary. Dr. Foote's nomination was held up because of a stock "conflict" problem. He may decide to keep the stock, give up the "watered-down" job.

DEPUTY SECRETARY QUARLES, once work has been finished on the fiscal '59 budget, also may decide the time has come to leave Pentagon duty. He was, of course, a top prospect to succeed SecDef Wilson, who said he urged him to stay on when announcement was made of Mr. McElroy's appointment. As Deputy Secretary, Mr. Quarles has more statutory authority than any other No. 2 man in Government, but after long service as Air Force Secretary, Assistant SecDef for Research and Development and Deputy Secretary, he could have reason to feel that his tour can now be ended.

IF DEPUTY SECRETARY QUARLES LEAVES, the White House will give top consideration to promoting 10-year man Assistant SecDef McNeil from the Comptroller's post to the No. 2 billet.

AN INGENIOUS ORDER eases the housing shortage at the Armed Forces Staff College (see Page 1). A school policy decrees that no pets will be allowed on the base. The number of families who prefer to live off the base, with pets rather than on base, without them, is just about equal to the number of surplus applicants for available housing.

TOTAL POPULATION on the grounds of the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, including administration, faculty, students and their families, is 780—of which 428 are children. "You might think the fence around here is to keep people out," one officer told a visitor from The Journal. "Fact is, it is to keep the children in!"

DOD NOW HAS AN AIRBORNE CHAIRBORNE civilian official. He's John L. Holcombe, Director of the Office of Program and Control under Assistant SecDef for International Security Affairs Sprague. Colonel Holcombe, USAR, is back at his Pentagon desk after winning parachutist wings while on active duty this month with the 82d Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N. C. He's 46.

COLLEGE CHANCES ARE GOING BEGGING in the Navy. The Pentagon has sent out a message telling men of the fleet of an "unparalleled" opportunity for qualified sailors to obtain a college education under the Navy Enlisted Advanced School Program. There has been only a "limited response" to this opportunity.

AN INTRICATE TRAINING PROBLEM at the Army's Combat Development Experimentation Center, Ft. Ord, Calif., (The Journal 16 Nov.) is to "untrain" soldiers prior to participation in field tests. CDEC is interested only in future problems; consequently to accomplish the mission, it is frequently necessary to tell soldiers in all ranks they must forget, for the length of the particular experiment, standard tactics learned in regular Army training programs and to master new tactics that will be tested. The experimental program is safeguarded by stabilized assignments of at least six months for all CDEC soldiers.

CAPT. EDWIN F. WOODHEAD, USN, who was one of those receiving the famed WWII blessing—"Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition"—from Chaplain Howell M. Gregory in the ammunition handling rooms of the cruiser USS New Orleans, has been given command of Pacific Fleet Amphibious Force ship USS Point Defiance.

THE ARMY'S COMMAND MANAGEMENT SCHOOL (The Journal 23 Nov.) at Ft. Belvoir, Va., streamlined its own set-up by way of setting a good example. The School has neither an Assistant Commandant nor an Executive Officer. Col. Frank Kowalski, USA, Commandant, says the staff and faculty organization is too small to warrant these two billets.

ARMY ARMED HELICOPTERS under test at the Army Aviation Center, Ft. Rucker, Ala., are gaining widespread support throughout the Army. Taking advantage of hills, trees, and other terrain features, the copters pop up from unexpected points, fire, and drop down again and move to another spot. It's estimated that used this way they can deliver firepower equal to a reinforced infantry squad. Besides, their pop-up effect makes them hard to hit.

SOME FOREIGN MILITARY OFFICERS attending U. S. Service schools may be invited to delay their return home in order to help Army Language School instructors revise textbooks. All training material used in the courses is prepared and published at the Presidio of Monterey. Many of the instructors—all are native-born—have been out of direct touch for some time with military developments in their homelands and are not current with later military terms. The school obtains a large number of foreign publications to help meet this problem, but officials point out that no source would be better than foreign officers just completing courses in the U. S.

THE FIRST AND ONLY Army aviator in the Armed Forces of Luxembourg, Artillery 1st Lt. Hank Maar, has just graduated from the Seventh Army Aviation Training Center at Stuttgart, Germany. He qualified as an instructor pilot in the L-20 "Beaver." Other Luxemburg officers now receiving basic flight instruction in Belgium will form a new Army Aviation Branch in the Duchy after training under Lieutenant Maar.

A SAC TUBE-BENDING CONTEST ends 31 January 1958. Top prize, a $5,000 Arnolt-Bristol sports car. On the sports car front, the recent directive encouraging organized clubs (The Journal 9 Nov.) has accelerated motor car activities throughout the Air Force. There's no question that enthusiast General LeMay, AF Vice CofS, had a big hand in pushing action to spur organized "hot rod" groups.

AIR FORCE COMMANDS can be expected to follow the Headquarters decision, effective 1 December, eliminating the title "Air Adjutant General." The new name: "Director of Administrative Services."

Stars Will Shift

MAJ. GEN. GEORGE HONNEN, Third Army, Ft. McPherson, Ga., will retire 30 Nov. after more than 38 years service.

BRIG. GEN. RICHARD H. HARRISON, Chief, Army Section, Joint U. S. Military Aid Group to Greece, has been assigned to Headquarters, Armed Forces Special Weapons Project, Washington, D. C., as Deputy Chief. He will report in March.

BRIG. GEN. FREDERICK W. ELLERY, Artillery Commander, 1st Infantry Division, Ft. Riley, Kans., has been assigned to Headquarters, Eighth Army (Korea), in April.

Michelscope Will Aid Combat Helicopters; Other Notes Concerning Army Aviation

A new and inexpensive night landing system for helicopters has been developed by Capt. Robert A. Michelson, Operations Officer for the Third Infantry Division Aviation Section, Ft. Benning, Ga.

Similar to the "glidescope" method which was previously used, the new development is described as a simpler apparatus which eliminates the need for the Glidescope generator and box.

The "Michelscope," named after its inventor, is placed into operation in this manner: Three short stakes are driven into the ground perpendicular to the direction of landing, and placed 50 feet from the desired landing site. Then, flashlights with red lenses are placed atop the stakes. A fourth, and longer stake, is driven into the ground 20 feet from and perpendicular to, the row of smaller stakes, and is equipped with a green lensed light.

The system is then based on what the pilot of the helicopter will see from the air. In a correct approach, the green light atop the taller stake, will block out the view of the center red light.

Benning authorities see the system as capable of Army-wide application. They feel it could greatly increase the effectiveness of helicopters in support of combat operations.

Army Wives Council Off To Fast Start, Mrs. Taylor Explains Coordination Effort

ARMY WIVES COUNCIL, representing 30 wives clubs in the Washington area, studies its first project—promotion of discount ticket sales for National Symphony concerts. Left to right: Mrs. Maxwell D. Taylor, wife of the Army Chief of Staff; Mrs. Hoy D. Davis, jr., Mrs. Abbot Low Moffat, and Mrs. William G. Holman, the latter two representing the women's committee of the orchestra.

WASHINGTONIANS are taking new notice of civic activities of Army wives.

Through the efforts of the recently organized Army Wives' Council in the greater Washington area, the local citizenry is beginning to realize the great potential Army personnel and their families have to support civic and cultural programs in the nation's capital.

First project of the group, organized this year by Mrs. Maxwell D. Taylor, wife of the Army Chief of Staff, was a novel program in support of the National Symphony Orchestra. The Army group placed fourth among all civilian and military groups supporting the orchestra.

"The Army Wives Council is not a new club," Mrs. Taylor told THE JOURNAL, "but is a coordinating council of the many Army wives clubs in the Washington Area."

"Its purpose is to coordinate the efforts of the 30 or more wives clubs in the area, in such a way as to use all their resources most effectively and demonstrate in a unified way the Army contribution to the civic community."

In promoting the sale of reduced-rate series tickets to the National Symphony, the Wives Council devised a plan to split up each series group into individual tickets so as to make them available inexpensively to local Army personnel.

The series-splitting method had not been tried before in Washington, but it worked with great success.

The council exceeded its goal by over 100 per cent, selling more than 100 full sets of series tickets. This meant, Wives Council members said, that more than 1,300 military people were going to concerts who otherwise might not.

Subscribing to a complete symphony series, it was explained, is too expensive for the average Army family. But when the reduced price series can be split up, as individual tickets among all Army personnel in the area, the concerts fall well within the budget of anyone who wishes to go.

High praise was given the project by Washington papers and the National Symphony Orchestra. In symphony and many other circles it was described as an "outstanding contribution to public relations."

Since the beginning of the Council's symphony program many civilian organizations and church groups have been investigating the series-splitting method. They are so impressed that they will adopt the Army method in their next drive for the orchestra.

The Army Wives Council is composed of the presidents or chairmen of 30 Army Wives organizations in the Washington area, with a program chairman or other member from each group. In all the council numbers over 60 Army wives.

It is organized very informally, but members expect the success of its initial project to bring about a more formal and permanent organization.

Current plans see the council meeting three or four times a year, as need for a unified and coordinated program becomes apparent in any of the areas in which Army wives clubs function.

Although no firm plans have been made for future council projects, Mrs. Taylor said, aid to Korean orphans is one avenue of expansion which the organization might explore.

"There are many very worth while causes," Mrs. Taylor said, "to which the Army Wives' Council might wish to contribute."

Stateside, persons 13 years of age or older will receive only one shot. Overseas dependents will get two injections not less than four weeks apart.

Children from six to twelve years old may be given two ½ cc doses at one week intervals. Vaccination of preschool children is not usually recommended as a routine procedure. # Air Force Tells Thinking Behind Its Action Suspending 1125 Rated Officers

(The Air Force, announcing flying status suspensions effective 1 Jan., gave the following detailed explanation of the action in answer to a newsmen's inquiry. The JOURNAL publishes it in full text.)

The 1957 Central Flight Status Selection Board completed its review on 25 October and its recommendations have been approved by reviewing authorities. As predicted in early releases, this year's screening was a more detailed and critical review of the rated potential exhibited by USAF rated personnel. As a result of the Board's action, 1125 rated officers consisting of 699 pilots, 233 navigators, and 193 aircraft observers will be suspended from flying status by Hq USAF effective 1 January 1958.

This is the fourth year of operation of the Flight Status Selection Board. Continuing analysis and evaluation has determined that the system is requisite to the changing requirements of the present day Air Force. Hq USAF has attempted each year to improve the screening criteria and processes used to place rated officers before the Selection Board. The over-all objective to be attained is, of course, the continuing vitalization of the rated component.

THE BASIC PHILOSOPHY for the Central Flight Status selection system was expressed to Commands in the letter of instructions as: "Since 35 years of age is presently regarded as the optimum limit for unrestricted tactical flying, it will be assumed that with age progression there normally will be a decrease in utilization as an active combat crew member. Rated utilization becomes increasingly important after age thirty-five (35) and flying status continues to be justified only so long as the officer has the grade and/or the ability to perform in a command or essential rated staff position.

"At age 43 and over the average officer's record should be clearly established. Retention on flying status will be based entirely on what is reflected in the record and not on a prediction of that which could be accomplished if a concerted effort was made by the officer concerned to bring his rated experience up to that of his contemporaries."

APPROXIMATELY 3200 RATED OFFICERS were reported by the major air commands as meeting this year's screening criteria. The screening criteria included: (1) all pilots 35 years of age and over who did not hold senior pilot ratings, (2) all pilots 43 years of age and over who did not have command pilot ratings, (3) all navigators and aircraft observers 35 years of age and over who did not hold senior navigator ratings.

In addition to the above mandatory criteria, the major commands were instructed to report any rated officer whose rated potential was considered questionable.

NO SINGLE FACTOR constituted the point of reference by which the Board recommended suspension. Hq USAF feels that each officer reported for review this year was afforded unprecedented opportunity to document his case. The individual's commander forwarded the report to the officer concerned for verification and justification for retention on flying status. The majority of the major commands, in turn, convened boards of their own in making command recommendations to the Hq USAF Board. The Hq Board reviewed and correlated the data from the officer's selection folder, his Form 5 or 5a, and the newly accomplished AF Form 11.

Specific factors considered were: his flying experience, age, combat or tactical experience, the officer's career desires as stated on the Form 11, his attitude and initiative regarding his participation in flying activities while assigned rated duties, the number of years away from cockpit assignments, the degree of non-rated specialization and requirements and the probability of utilization in aircrew and command duties. Mitigating factors considered were breaks in service, POW, combat records, isolated assignments; however these factors were not considered paramount.

Many of the officers reviewed have served in non-rated fields during a major portion of their careers and have expressed desires in these or related career fields. AF requirements for their services in these non-rated skills in many instances is extremely high, but justification for continued flying status cannot be supported solely by these requirements. The officers affected may continue to wear their wings as evidence of their former aircrew positions.

THE BOARD ACTION AFFECTS 57 Lieutenants, 776 Captains, 207 Majors, 65 Lt. Colonels, and 20 Colonels. Ages span from a minimum number under age 35, with the majority being from 35 to 45 and a small number over age 50.

Marine Corps Studies Super Sea Planes; "Need To Have" Replaces "Nice To Have"

"Seaplanes, the G-4 said, are just another tool with which to do the job."

At the same time, General Paige explained, "under the modern concept, the Marine Corps has developed a system for delivery of supplies at the beach and place needed, rather than establishing beach stockpiles," as was done during WWII. The helicopter is essential to the Corps as it is striving toward "rapid replacement of small units." In addition, the helicopter is a basic tool in the supply system. Although assaulting troops carry enough supplies for their immediate needs, the Corps will have to establish widely dispersed supply points, via "copter," to resupply them and bring in supporting weapons.

Since the objective of the Vertical Envelopment doctrine is rapid dispersion of small units, the Corps is making an all-out effort to break all its equipment into packages small enough to support a battalion-sized unit. The supporting equipment will have to be brought in from off-shore ships by helicopter during the initial stages of a battle, General Paige stated.

The G-4 said that one Division already is testing the new supply concept and that present plans are that within the next two years the entire Fleet Marine Force will be using the system.

He said, however, that the time "may be somewhat longer before the Corps will have the types of shipping needed to fully implement the new supply system."

The most essential type of ship needed to support the vertical envelopment doctrine is the LPH (Landing Ship-Personnel-Helicopter). This will be the workhorse of the Fleet Marine Force. It will be capable of carrying an entire battalion landing team and a transport helicopter squadron. The LPH will have space for troop cargo and have between-deck ramps and cargo elevators to speed the loading of helicopters and vehicles with bulk cargo. The Corps needs 12 of these ships to carry its three Divisions, along with the helicopter squadrons needed to land the attacking force.

The Marine Corps' immediate goal, General Paige said, is to obtain enough LPH's to move one Division.

In the architectural engineering stage is another ship—the LPD (Amphibious Transport Dock)—which will be used to move the heavy support equipment onto beaches which have been cleared by assault troops. Into this ship will be built the most modern materials handling equipment available to quicken the off-loading heavy ordnance and supplies.

The difference between the two ships is that the LPH will be built to carry troops and material assault equipment while the LPD's prime mission will be to carry supporting heavy equipment. The LPD, however, also will be capable of carrying a limited number of assault troops which will be flown off a small flight-deck.

Under the Vertical Envelopment doctrine, General Paige said, the Corps is striving to avoid concentrations of men and supplies. At the same time, an effort is being made to reduce the time spent in handling supplies and equipment and in reducing the volume of supplies necessary to back-up front-line troops.

In all its procurement, the G-4 said, the Corps is aiming at light weight, small packages and easy portability.

"We are guided by a 'need to have' policy," he stated. "The 'nice-to-have' policy" in procurement "is out the window."

Gen. Thurman Tells Small Business Role

From 1952 through Fiscal Year 1957, there has been no percentage decrease in the share of military dollars received by small business concerns from Air Force prime contractors.

Speaking before the Small Business Administration Meeting in San Diego, Calif., 6 November, Maj. Gen. William T. Thurman, USAF, Deputy Director for Procurement and Production of the Air Materiel Command, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, placed the percentage paid to small firms by large Air Force contractors in both years as 21.5 per cent. This, he said, constituted 38 per cent of all money paid out by the large contractors to all subcontractors, large and small.

"I will grant you," he said, "that smaller expenditures will mean fewer small as well as large concerns participating in the Air Force program." But, he maintained, "there is a place in our program for small business concerns that are producing a quality product at a reasonable price."

The General cited a steady increase in prime contracts awarded directly to small business. During Fiscal Year 1957, he said, these contracts amounted to $723 million, an increase of 14 per cent over the previous year.

To assure small business a proper share of Air Force contracting, General Thurman suggested that firms capable of filling Air Force needs make themselves known to the procurement personnel at the Air Materiel Command or any of its procurement districts. One of the important functions of these procurement districts, he said, "is to assist interested manufacturers to list their concerns at the appropriate Air Force procurement offices regardless of their location."

He further advised those firms who have potential as subcontractors on prime Air Force contracts to keep up their contacts with Air Force prime contractors.

General Thurman assured the meeting that "we do and will continue to give special attention to the specific problem of any small businessman who will bring his difficulty to our attention."

The Navy's first 1,000-miles-an-hour-plus fighter, the Chance Vought F8U-1 Crusader, soon will be on duty with Fleet operational squadrons in two oceans.

Fighter Squadron 32 (VF-32) of Cecil Field, Fla., first operational squadron to receive the world's fastest Navy fighter, will be the first unit to take the Crusader to sea duty when it goes aboard the USS Saratoga in the Atlantic shortly after the first of the year.

Giving the Crusader its first regular duty at sea in the Pacific will be Fighter Squadron 154 of Moffett Field, Calif. This squadron, second to receive the Crusader, will go aboard the USS Hancock shortly after VF-32 deploys.

The way already is being paved for the deployments which will mark conversion of the Navy's carrier striking power to 1,000-miles-an-hour-plus aircraft. VF-32 completed the initial phase of its carrier qualification aboard the USS Forrestal the week of 14 November as a prelude to deployment and VF-154 went aboard the Hancock 18 November for carrier qualification work.

VF-32 will return to the Forrestal next month with other squadrons of Carrier Air Group Three. VF-154 will complete additional carrier qualification exercises on the Hancock in December.

Crusaders flown by the squadrons are of the same type which set the 1,015-mile-an-hour Thompson Trophy national speed record in 1956. A photographic version of the Crusader made the first supersonic crossing of the nation last July in three hours, 22 minutes.

A MINE-KILLING ROLLER, capable of withstanding anti-tank mine explosions, can now be installed on tanks to detonate mines before the tank tracks reach the danger point. Fabricated of high strength steel, the complete roller is made up of a series of wheels four feet in diameter and six inches thick mounted on independent shafts or axles.

The tank in combat will push a six wheel section in front of each track.

A SIMPLE CORROSION INDICATOR which reveals tell-tale corrosive signs before it affects Air Force equipment has been developed by the Air Research and Development Command, Baltimore, Md. The process involves placing a thin metal coating on the equipment through a vacuum deposition process. When corrosion begins, the thin metal film will change in appearance.

NEW PERSONNEL LANDING CRAFT were put through comparative operational tests 19 November near Coronado, Calif. Among the four LCVP's tested, one used a right angle drive, another waterjet propulsion, a third a gas turbine and a conventional type, stripped down and designed for economical production. The waterjet's plastic hull was built by Zenith Plastic of Gardena, Calif.; its drive by Western Gear Works of Los Angeles. The right-angle drive's hull was constructed by Kettenberg of San Diego; its drive by Waste King of Los Angeles. The mass production model is by Kettenberg of San Diego. The gas turbine engine is by Boeing of Washington. The tests are being conducted by the Pacific Fleet Amphibious Force for the Navy's Bureau of Ships in Washington, D. C.

TRANSORIZON RADIO COMMUNICATION will be given greater mobility with a compact, air transportable radio communication terminal, equipped with an antenna that inflates like a balloon. The terminal, designed for the Army Signal Corps by Collins Radio Co. of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and being tested at Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., can be packed in two metal "huts" that serve as shelters when the station is erected. Terminal capacity allows for 12 voice or 96 teletypewriter messages, or any combination of the two simultaneously at a single station.

US CofC Hits "Cumbersome Procedures" In Def Dept's Settlement of Contracts

At a time when military materiel is more costly than ever before, the Defense Department's "cumbersome procedures" for settling terminated contracts are adding still more to the total cost of defense, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States charged this week.

These procedures, as set forth in Section VIII of the Armed Services Procurement Regulation, are a major factor in delaying settlements often for as long as two years, the Chamber contends.

The Chamber says that the longer a settlement for a terminated contract is delayed, the more the government has to spend in the process. For the government must compensate the contractor for many of the settlement costs.

"One of the greatest obstacles to prompt settlements is the set of rules in Section VIII for screening and disposing of terminated inventory," the Chamber says. "Usually the screening process takes up most or all of the 60-day period for plant clearance, and during all this time, the contractor has to store and maintain the property on his own premises."

"Ordinarily," the Chamber continues, "contractors do not charge the government directly for the cost of inventory storage and maintenance. But this cost is a legitimate business expense, the Chamber points out, and it is considered as such in computing corporate taxes. Thus the government ultimately pays it."

The Chamber recommends that as soon as inventory schedules have been submitted, the government should take possession of all inventory it selects for screening, and the contractor should be allowed to retain or dispose of the rest immediately.

"Another obstacle to prompt settlement," the Chamber argues, "is the lack of uniformity among the military services and the contracting agencies. Each service and agency develops its own rules and procedures for settlements, and the result is confusion which contributes to the delay and cost. The Chamber particularly mentions the lack of uniformity in auditing methods of the services, because this makes auditing all the more lengthy and expensive."

"There would be less confusion and waste throughout the whole settlement process if more reliance were placed on business judgment," says the Chamber.

Electronic Weatherman Developed At Monmouth

An "electronic weatherman" to provide vital high-altitude weather information has been developed by the Army Signal Engineering Laboratories, Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

The new system is said to spot high altitude indications of oncoming storms, hurricanes, tornadoes and other bad weather faster and more accurately than any previous device. It is the first system to chart high velocity winds like the stream on a routine basis.

Specially designed computers of the system work in conjunction with a three-pound weather station, called a radio-sonde, which is carried aloft by a balloon. Coded radio signals are sent back to the computers where they are processed into usable humidity, temperature, and wind readings.

The system can automatically track a balloon to an altitude of 24 miles even at a distance of 200 miles from the launching site. This is twice the effective range of previous equipment.

Chaplain Taylor Leaves Maxwell For Pentagon

Chaplain (Col.) Robert P. Taylor, Air University Staff Chaplain, Maxwell AFB, since June 1953, left 27 November to assume duties as Chief of the Personnel Division, Office of Air Force Chaplains, Washington, D. C.

Chaplain Taylor

Chaplain Taylor will be succeeded by Chaplain (Col.) James F. Patterson, who presently holds the Washington post.

Chaplain Taylor is one of two chaplains to remain in service who survived 42 months in Japanese prison camps in WWII.

Upon entering military service in September 1940, he was assigned to Barksdale Field, La., and in April 1941 was transferred to the 31st Infantry in Manila. At the outbreak of WWII his unit was transferred to Bataan where he was awarded for bravery and awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action.

At the surrender of American forces, he became a chaplain in the prison camp where he ministered to more than 10,000 patients. In the summer of 1942 he spent 14 months in solitary confinement for smuggling food and medicine to the patients. Upon removal from camp, which was too small to either stand up or lie down, he was taken to the hospital as a patient. The Japanese thought he would not live.

Chaplain Taylor was taken to Japan and Manchuria on one of the infamous "hell ships" which was bombed twice by American planes with a loss of over a thousand lives. Although wounded and he continued to minister as a chaplain to the survivors.

Following his liberation and return to the U. S., Chaplain Taylor resumed his duties as a chaplain and has since held assignments of Wing Chaplain, Mather AFB, Calif.; Deputy Chaplain, Air Training Command; Deputy Chaplain, Air Materiel Command and Chaplain for the 4th Air Patrol in Washington, D. C.

He is married to the former Mildred of Carrollton, Texas. The couple has one son, Robert P., Jr., age 6.

They Keep Busy

ADM. MELVYN H. McCOY, USN-Ret., has joined the Norris-Thermador Co., Los Angeles, Calif., as Manager of Sales and Programs of the company's Military Products Department. He will have his headquarters in the company's Washington, D. C., office.

COL BENJAMIN R. WIMER, USA-Ret., Honolulu, T. H., manager of the Gaughy & Associates architectural and consulting engineer firm, Norfolk, Va., has received the Legion of Merit for "outstanding service" with the Joint Construction Agency in Europe. While in the European post, he was responsible for construction of Armed Forces facilities valued at over $98 million and dispersed over 2,000 miles in three Mediterranean countries.

COL FEODOR O. SCHMIDT, USA-Ret., former Senior Army Advisor to the President of the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., is a registered representative of the stock brokerage firm of Arnold and Co. He specializes in the sale of mutual investment funds at the company's San Mateo, Calif., Branch.

MAJ. DANIEL BREEDON, USA-Ret., has been appointed Staff Assistant in the Army Missiles Department, Aerophysics Development Corp., Santa Barbara, Calif., a subsidiary of Curtiss-Wright Corp. During his service career he specialized in gunnery and fire control equipment, proximity fuses and guided missiles.

Fiscal Chief Tells Spending Plans; McNeil Separates "Fact From Fancy," Cites '58 Pay Raise Plans

(The following authoritative statement on military spending was made in a report prepared by Assistant Secretary of Defense W. J. McNeil, Comptroller, for the 21 November meeting of the National Industrial Conference Board at Milwaukee, Wisc.)

It is particularly difficult during this time of the year, when the Defense budget for the next fiscal period is under active consideration at the highest levels of government, to keep the Defense problem in proper perspective and to separate fact from fancy. Just a few months ago a casual reader of the headlines could well have come to the conclusion that the Defense program was being drastically reduced. Last week, in the wake of the President's speech at Oklahoma City, the casual reader could have come to exactly the opposite conclusion—that the whole Defense program was going to be dramatically increased.

Neither of these conclusions is correct. The government has for some years been following a policy of defense for the long pull—a more or less steady over-all level of effort, for as long as may be required, and within which resources are constantly redirected in accord with changing military technology.

Within the defense program, as a whole, there is now an urgent need for a more rapid reorientation of effort than we have experienced in the past.

President Eisenhower at Oklahoma City discussed some of the areas which must receive much greater emphasis in the years ahead. He also warned that, "We must once more go over all other military expenditures with redoubled determination to save every possible dime. We must make sure that we have no needless duplication or obsolete programs or facilities." This latter point, apparently, did not get the public attention it deserved.

Recent demonstrations of Soviet technological competence should not only spur us on to examine rigorously the things that we are not doing, but also the things that we are doing and which may no longer be worth doing.

The newspaper stories of several months ago may have created the impression that the defense program was being severely curtailed. One report went so far as to say that "the reduction in the defense program is the largest since the end of World War II." This is simply not true. Defense expenditures have been rising steadily—from $35.5 billion in fiscal year 1955 to $35.8 billion in 1956, and $38.4 billion in 1957—$2.4 billion in excess of the budget estimate for that year. Expenditures in the current fiscal year will be even a little higher—over $38½ billion—granted, however, that they will still be lower than the $40 billion rate of spending in the last half of fiscal year 1957. It was the rapidly accelerating rate of spending in 1957—$37 billion in the first half, $40 billion in the second half and pointing higher in 1958—that caused the Department to adjust some of its programs.

Although a determined effort has been made to bring 1958 expenditures within the budget estimate of $38 billion, it became clear a few weeks ago that we could not quite make it. Rather than resort to actions which might in any way impair the hard core of our military strength or encourage the use of unbusinesslike practices, the President agreed to permit the Department to exceed its expenditure estimate by a moderate amount.

In this connection, we had received a number of reports about a month ago that some elements of our huge field organization had apparently misconstrued our efforts to live within the expenditure estimate and had delayed paying some bills. This misunderstanding has since been dispelled by the Secretary of Defense.

The military departments have been instructed to "make it clear that they will of course pay bills as they fall due under the terms of their respective contracts, in accordance with normal business practice."

Expenditures in the first quarter of fiscal year 1958 totaled $9.8 billion—an annual rate of $39.2 billion compared with a little more than $38½ billion estimated for the year as a whole, and with an annual rate of $40.1 billion in the last half of fiscal year 1957. These figures do not include about $2 billion a year of expenditures for Military Assistance, which is also administered by the Department of Defense. Clearly, the adjustments to the defense program needed to bring expenditures into line with the current estimate have been substantially completed.

Of the more than $38.5 billion of expenditure estimated for fiscal year 1958, the regular operating costs of the military establishment will take about $20.5 billion, about the same amount as last year. Included are pay for military and civilian personnel, maintenance and operations of military installations, ships, aircraft, vehicles, etc. and about $4 to $5 billion for procurement of utilities and services, POL, spare parts and miscellaneous general supplies.

Expenditures for military public works are estimated at about $1.8 billion—slightly less than last year and the year before.

Reserve components expenditures are estimated at $1.2 billion—about $130 million more than last year and $300 million more than in 1956—reflecting the continued build-up of the reserve forces.

Research and development expenditures, estimated at almost $1.8 billion, will be almost $75 million more than last year and about $250 million more than the year before. These figures do not include the cost of evaluation and test of new weapons or certain other research and development support costs included in other accounts. Including these costs, the total being spent on the development of new weapons now exceeds $5 billion per year.

Expenditures for major procurement this year are estimated at $13.8 billion—$150 million greater than last year and about $1.6 billion greater than in 1956. Aircraft will still take well over half of total procurement expenditures, $7.6 billion—about $350 million less than in 1957 but about $500 million more than in 1956. Missiles will take almost $2.8 billion—about $700 million more than in 1957 and almost two and one-half times more than in 1956. Expenditures for ships will be somewhat higher—about $1.1 billion in 1958 compared with about $900 million in both 1957 and 1956.

Expenditures for other categories of major procurement, estimated at $2.3 billion, will be about $300 million lower than last year and about $600 million lower than the year before. Expenditures for combat vehicles will be about half of what they were last year, but expenditures for support vehicles will be about the same. Electronics and communications equipment expenditures will be somewhat lower than last year but higher than 1956. Expenditures for ammunition will continue their downward trend and will be about one-fourth of what they were in 1956.

It is still too early and, in fact, it would not be appropriate for me to discuss the fiscal year 1959 budget, as such. However, it is clear from what has already been said by the President and by the Secretary of Defense that defense expenditures in fiscal year 1959 will be a little higher than this year. It is also clear from what has been said publicly, that expenditures for missiles are likely to be significantly higher and expenditures for aircraft somewhat lower than this year.

Over-all expenditures for research and development may also be somewhat higher than in the current fiscal year. The pay increases for military personnel which the President has indicated he will support in the coming fiscal year will more than offset any savings realized from the reductions in numbers announced for 1958.

The over-all volume of business to be placed with industry in FY 1959 should be as large or larger than 1958. Inevitably, however, there will be some shift in emphasis from current to newer weapons systems. This, in turn, will have some dislocating effects on particular industries and, more important, on particular firms. Furthermore, because of the greatly increasing unit costs of these new weapons, the Defense Department will be buying smaller quantities of fewer models. This will have a tendency to channel defense business to fewer contractors and is a matter of considerable concern to the Department.

AF Communications Will Treble Volume

The first of five new high-speed electronic communications centers for the Air Force's nationwide network has been inaugurated at Andrews AFB, Md.

The system, designed, installed and leased to the Air Force by Western Union, is expected to be in complete operation by the end of 1958. It will handle three times as many messages faster and with less than half the personnel formerly required.

Capacity of the new system will be more than 2.5 billion words annually, three times the volume of the systems in use immediately following WW II. The increased volume will be handled by only 480 operators as compared with 1,300 formerly required for one-third of the load. The system will release a total of 1.7 million man-hours annually for other military requirements.

Other links in the system will be located at: McClellan AFB, Sacramento, Calif.; Wright-Patterson AFB, Dayton, Ohio; Robins AFB, Macon, Ga.; and Carswell AFB, Ft. Worth, Tex.

Army, AF Announce Dry Cleaning Curbs

The Army and Air Force have begun to crack down on dry cleaning concessionaires who process off-post cleaning in government-owned buildings.

"... Some commanders are allowing dry cleaning concessionaires," states DA Cir 60-11 and AFL 147-12, "who have made considerable investment in plant cleaning facilities only to have the strength of the installation materially decrease from the original plan, to negotiate business off the installations with commercial customers in order to use the on-installation capacity."

Huge Missile Site Slated For Warren

The Air Force said 21 November that construction will start about mid-1958 on a missile site at Francis E. Warren AFB, Wyo., that will cost more than $65 million.

Nothing was done to discourage newspaper speculation that this would be the site for an intercontinental missile facility.

The official announcement said Air Training Command schools at Warren will be phased out as construction and associated activities are programmed in at the base.

The Air Research and Development Command will have command jurisdiction of Warren, just as it does at Camp Cooke, Calif., taken over from the Army and used as a missile training site.

Plans call for assignment of 4,000 to 5,000 personnel to the Wyoming missile site.

Service Academy '58 Grid Review

Services Tell Plans For Early Release

The Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps have authorized commanders to accomplish separation actions on an accelerated basis for the holiday season.

Army enlisted personnel whose service would normally end between 21 December and 5 January will generally be separated prior to December 21.

Navy plans call for release prior to 21 December of enlisted personnel whose active service would normally terminate between 20 December and 12 January.

The Marine Corps will release during the period from 18 December to December 21 those enlistees whose terms of service would normally be completed between 22 December and 19 January.

The Air Force plans accelerated separation of enlistees whose term of service would normally expire between 1 December and 10 January.

Early release is contingent upon the individual serviceman's desires, the capabilities of the separation activities, and is subject to military considerations to the contrary. Certain reservists among those undergoing 6-months-active-duty-for-training under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955 are not eligible for early release. Within these limitations, every effort will be made to accelerate separations before the holiday season.

Cdr. Richardson Takes Info Post In Japan

Cdr. Frank W. Richardson, reporting from the Pentagon where he was Head, Pictorial Branch, Office of the Chief of Navy Information, has succeeded Lt. Col. L. F. Hood, as Deputy Chief of Information, United States Forces, Japan.

Colonel Hood transferred to Okinawa as Coordinator of Information Activities, Ryukyus.

A veteran of nearly 30 years in the newspaper, trade journal and information fields, Commander Richardson was Executive Officer in the Public Information Offices of the Ninth and Third Naval Districts and the Eastern Sea Frontier during WWII. He also served as Flag Secretary of the 7th Amphibious Force in the Southwest Pacific.

Col. Jack Dunn Heads Military Government Assn.

COL. JACK DUNN, USAR, has been elected President of the New York Metropolitan Chapter of the Military Government Association, composed of over 500 Reserve officers, enlisted men, industrial and civic leaders.

He is Director of Sales of the Government Division of Noxon Inc. and of the American Kitchen Products Co., Jersey City, N. J.

Gen. Doolittle Sees More Unification Ahead Says Cordiner Action Would Help Defense

Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, USAF-Ret., went before the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee 26 November to present his authoritative views on U. S. military problems and progress.

Among the highlights of his testimony—

• A forecast that "some day I believe we will have to have an old-type general staff with a single head."

• An appeal for action on the Cordiner Report which, he said, "would do a great deal to help the Services."

Dr. Vannevar Bush and General Doolittle, who is head of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, were among the first witnesses called by the committee. Both agreed with the noted physicist, Dr. Edward Teller (page one) that the missiles program must be expanded and accelerated and that more funds must be provided for the strategic air forces and for research and development.

They also sided with Dr. Teller in the belief that the United States School system must be overhauled to give greater emphasis to scientific studies.

Doctor Bush and General Doolittle also spoke out in favor of revamping the top-level military planning structure.

Dr. Bush said "the absence of overall planning" is responsible for the "tangle" in which we are now involved. He suggested the creation of an "effective, central planning body acting as a staff to our Commander-in-Chief, digesting all of these things, putting them into their relative frame work, and out of it producing a program for the country."

He said "that program, when approved by the Commander-in-Chief, would, in my opinion, have the loyalty of every Service, and the bickering would stop."

Dr. Bush charged that the present Joint Chiefs of Staff structure has never prepared unified war plans or unified programs.

He said "You cannot expect a man to be a forceful leader of a Service, the commanding general responsible for keeping the morale of that Service at a high pitch, responsible for seeing that that Service is at the peak of effectiveness, and at the same time expect that man to sit down with two others, forget all of his Service responsibilities and plan actions from a national standpoint for all three Services."

He said, "the Joint Chiefs of Staff have never done that. They could not have been expected to do so, and they haven't."

Much the same argument was voiced by General Doolittle. He suggested that the office of the Secretary of Defense strengthened by the creation of an advisory military staff to assist him in solving honest differences of opinion that now occur."

Creation of such a staff is "called for now," he declared, "and is naturally the first step in whatever changes need be made." He suggested that the staff be composed of "young, progressive people who have had experience in all three Services."

He said they would have an advantage over the JCS members "because they would not be the head of their Service."

General Doolittle said, "I do not know what we are heading for a single service, single uniform." He said, "Some day I believe we will have to have an old-type general staff with a single head." He added, "At present we may be ready for it."

In other areas, General Doolittle made these points:

• An all-out effort must be made in the anti-missile missile program.

• More funds must be provided to train pilots in the air with a maximum training program.

• Our research and development must be aggressive and "must specialize basic research in all fields."

• There should be some relaxation of the present security regulations to permit greater dissemination of scientific developments both to the public and our allies. All information which "does not do Russia more good than it does us" should be released.

• The over-all, long-range missile program should be coordinated. "A national coordinating agency would avoid unnecessary and wasteful duplication."

• The United States is "stronger militarily than Russia," but Russia's rate of progress "is much faster and unless we forge ahead at full speed she will overtake us."

• An interchange of officers among the Services might aid in providing greater cooperation and teamwork.

• The recommendations of the Cordiner Committee "would do a great deal to help the Services."

• The controversy over the Thor and Jupiter missiles should be decided once in favor of one of the missiles.

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Texas) chairman of the subcommittee, said his hearings would recess after taking testimony from the Defense Department witnesses and resume on 13 December meeting through 17 December and then recessing again until after Christmas.

He succeeded Cdr. W. D. Harrington, who reports for temporary duty with the Comptroller General, Washington, D. C., before proceeding to NAS Memphis, Tenn., for a permanent assignment.

Colonel Hansen Named

Col. Ralph W. Hansen, Executive Officer to the Chief, U. S. Army Reserve and ROTC Affairs, has been appointed Resident Army Reserve member of the Army's General Staff Committee on National Guard and Army Reserve Policy.

He succeeds Col. John R. Sharp, who will retire on 30 November.
